A Letter from the Pastor

Dear Parish Family,

Here's a eulogy I'll never forget from Leanne's daughter, Abby. Given July 17th:

"I met Jesus through my mama at the table. Circling the dining room with her at age five, I have asked about heaven. And while placing knives and forks on napkins at each place, together in preparation for a meal, she spoke of the cross. She spoke of Jesus.

Around our family table, we learned to share food, stories and time. We learned to linger long after lasagna, black coffee, and laughter over tales where our Army family had been, stories of all we had seen and done. Growing up, our mama hosted cadets and cousins, priests and friends from across the ocean. She made a table so inviting that we've lingered next to her there, time and again, for nearly thirty-five years.

As children, we shared space on Sunday too—the six of us hand in hand, kneeling shoulder to shoulder, thigh to thigh. Overseas, we celebrated Mass as we traveled; we were as creative as our family priest. We partook of Eucharist in airports, hotel rooms, and on European trains. We shared communion in an Israeli kibbutz, down a catacomb in Rome, and at Saint Peter's Basilica. We equated the Mass with family, not location; communion with relationship, not just a piece of bread. Wherever we were, we broke bread. Our life was liturgy. We ate together, we worshipped together, and as a family on the move, we kept time together. Our table was universal; and deeply intimate.

Today I feel like my whole life is wrapped up in her and her home table and the Mass. Aside from Alaska and her back deck with the birds, her favorite places were with us at home and with Jesus right here. And I believe her home table and this one (the altar) here are inseparable.

On Friday morning in our raw fresh grief, I didn't know where to go. I found myself at church in front of the altar. My dad, too, that day, made his way here. With her prayer journal, she wrote with an exclamation: 'I love giving Jesus to my friends!'

As far back as I can remember, I've watched her cry over the Eucharist. Cry while giving Him away. Cry while receiving Him. Cry while thanking God after it. Cry while kneeling here, missing her own mama. And I wonder how long she's had heaven on her mind... Knowing that right here at Mass it is as close to heaven as we can get. And I wonder if she's been preparing for this moment our whole lives. Because how else do you call your beloveds to the table to eat and drink and linger and share life? How else but loving so tenderly and consistently.

This week we've gathered and lingered together at my home. It has been holy and good and right. We've circled up and prayed over food and black coffee every single night, not wanting to be apart. And as we quietly driven down the street to spend time in her home, we've carefully walked through every room. Needing to touch and smell and remember. Listen. And as I've walked from room to room, all I can think is ...

'I need to go home and make a home. I need to go home and set a table.' Because we have to know how to gather and stay, feed one another good food; fill up on togetherness and time and touch. This is how we change the world; around the table, inside our homes. Receiving love and then giving it away. Our mama did it again and again. And now she's everywhere... Every story, every song, every kind and tender moment, every phone call, every morning cup of coffee, every flower, every birdsong, every moment of childlike play... there she is. That was her way.

And you need to know something too... It is the way of Jesus too... Because He is everywhere all the time. Inescapable. Ready. Full of grace and truth and comfort...

Mama, you permeate everything. There is nothing here untouched by you and your goodness. You have become a fragrant offering. You are the aroma of Christ. And now? We get to become the same. We get to honor Jesus by honoring you. Thank you remind us that we have a calling: Permeate every nook and cranny with the sweet smell of salvation: Give grace and show mercy. Love what is good, beautiful and true. Touch with care. Sing when the moment demands a song. Study the Word of God. Show up again and again, and again. Humbly have the mind of a child-but full of wonder and delight. Seek Him in creation. Find Him in every face. Stay close to the Table and keep watch. Pray. This was our mama. And this is our God.

So, if you know her then you can't say you haven't seen Him. She was the sweet scent of Christ. And today she is happy. Because. "Happy are those called to the Supper of the Lamb."

Thank you taking the time to read this.

Father Tom Devery
